

Report of Operative R P Terrell

New Brunswick, N.J.
Sept. 28, 1926

Interview with: WILLARD H. DEINZER, formerly salesman for Armour &amp; Co.

Operative went to the butcher store now operated by Willard H. Deinzer at Stone St. and Easton Ave. and was told by a clerk that Mr. Deinzer was not in, but that he lived at 159 Albany St. and could probably be seen there.

Operative then proceeded to Deinzer's home at the above address and there interviewed him. He stated that he had been in the employ of Armour & Co. as an outside salesman for 14 years and two years ago went into the butcher business for himself at Stone St. and Easton Ave. He also stated that he had covered the States of Connecticut, New Jersey and New York for the above firm.

Operative asked him if he was familiar with an order for hog serum placed with Armour & Co. by Jane Gibson. He replied that he knew she had purchased this merchandise, but did not know whether she had 'phoned the office or called there personally. He said that she had been at the office at different times as he had heard Phybe, the inside salesman mention it to him. He said that after Sept. 14th, 1922 he remembers that they used to "kid" Phybe about Mrs. Gibson, saying that he would be brought into the case.

In answer to operative's question regarding the tipping off of the reporters that Mr. Dowd had information about the case, he denies ever having done so.

Operative asked him if he ever called on Mrs. Gibson to collect the bill she owed for the hog serum. He replied that he never did so, and that he was never out to the place where she lives nor ever saw her in person. Deinzer continued, saying that, Jimmy Adel, the city salesman would be the man to see about collecting the bill. He said that the best time to see Adel was at 4 P.M. at the office or at his home at 97 Baldwin St. Deinzer also said that Adel was known also as Jimmy Cassino.
